

IAN PARKS

PODCAST GUEST

DIGITAL FORENSICS ANALYST

HOW TO KILL A FLOWER

BELISARIOFOSCA.COM

LIFE PURPOSE

To find the truth, no matter how buried.

His work in digital forensics has made him obsessive about details and accuracy, and he thrives on solving complex puzzles.

However, he's haunted by some of the darker cases he's encountered, especially those that seem to defy logical explanation.

His appearance on the podcast may be his way of working through some of the unsolved mysteries he's encountered.

Ian believes in the power of technology and evidence to reveal the truth, but he's seen enough in his career to be wary of coincidences and easy answers.

BELIEFS

He is not a full believer in the supernatural, but he is open to the idea that some things can't be explained by science alone.

This internal conflict makes him an interesting guest on the podcast, as he's not fully committed to either side of the mystery.

PERSONALITY

Ian is meticulous, introverted, and slightly paranoid.

His job has made him distrustful of simple explanations, and he's learned to keep his guard up.

While he's a bit awkward in social situations, he's extremely confident when discussing his work.

He has a tendency to go off on tangents when discussing cases, showing his obsessive nature.

Ian is also quietly determined, and his calm exterior hides a burning need to solve whatever mystery is in front of him.

CONVERSATION TONE

Ian speaks with precision and care, often pausing to make sure his words are accurate. He has a formal, almost clinical way of speaking, but there's an underlying intensity when discussing cases that have affected him personally.

His tone will clash with Zach's more relaxed style, creating tension as the two try to balance entertainment with the seriousness and gravity of the topics discussed.